What is accessibility and why is it important?

Accessibility can be viewed as the "ability to access"

More than 61 million Americans have physical or mental disabilities – both temporary and permanent. That’s roughly one in four people in the United States alone.

Worldwide, 285 million people have vision differences, 36 million are blind, 246 million have low vision or color blindness

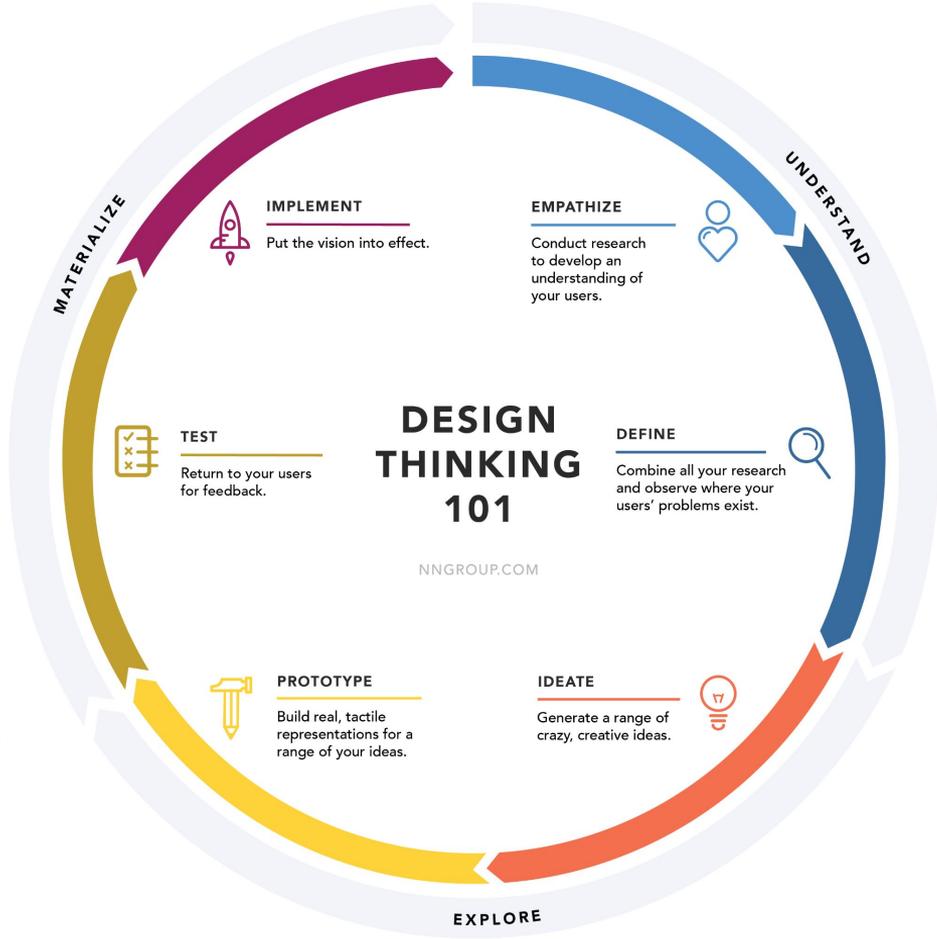

Do you consider email accessibility factors such as color contrast, screen readers, and ADA compliance?

Tactical ways to make your email accessible

Accessibility is for everyone

- Add lang="en" to the html tag
- Use ARIA tags
 - Put role="presentation" on tables with content.
 - Use role="button" on buttons.
- Use semantic markup
 - Header & paragraph tags with live text
- Use or for lists
- Make buttons at least 44px tall - the side of a thumb
- Avoid typing in all caps - some screen readers will spell out each letter. Use text-transform instead if possible

Does your accessibility rock?

Your email matters. So make sure all of your subscribers can interact with it. According to the World Health Organization (WHO), approximately 15% of the global population lives with a disability.

From contrasting colors to screen readers, there's a lot to keep in mind when it comes to accessibility. Don't fret! We've got a guide that covers the best practices to help your team deliver #emailperfection.

- Ensure good color contrast
- Don't use true white (#FFFFFF) or true black (#000000) - creates halos
- Make link text descriptive
 - Never use “Click here” or “Learn more”
- Make links look like links
- Make text at least 16px with a line-height that is at least 4px more than the font-size
- Side-align paragraphs
 - only use center alignment for 2 short sentences or less.

Automated Accessibility Steps

- Setup code for screen readers
- Presentation roles
- Remove title attributes
- Set alt text
- Adjust contrast ratio
- Enhance link accessibility
- Review using zoom

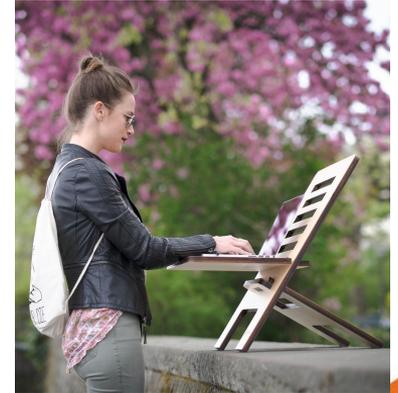

The image displays the Email on Acid Accessibility tool interface, which is used for auditing and improving the accessibility of email content. The interface is divided into several sections:

- Accessibility Panel (Left): Shows a list of accessibility issues. The first issue, "Set image alt text", is marked with a green checkmark and indicates that 4 images have repeated alt text. The second and third issues, "The Wait is Over", are marked with red X's and indicate that alt text has been repeated.
- Image Preview (Top Right): Shows a close-up of an image with the alt text "Dollar Shave Club Logo".
- Text Preview (Middle Right): Shows a close-up of the text "The Wait is Over".
- Enhance Link Accessibility (Bottom Left): Shows a section for enhancing link accessibility, with a "UNDERLINE ALL" button and a list of links. One link, "Text: we have solutions", is highlighted with a red box and a "UNDERLINE" button.
- Zoomed View (Bottom Right): Shows a zoomed-in view of the email content, highlighting a link with a red dashed border and a "UNDERLINE" button.

DESIGNING AND BUILDING FOR HUMANITY

Ryan

“Some people who go blind later on in life, don’t know what accessibility is and they don’t know what inaccessibility is. They just remember that being sighted and using the internet and using a computer was a really easy thing for them to do.”

deque

Paul

“Don’t assume people all experience your email in the way that you do.”

ACTION ROCKET

Dona

“I don’t want anyone to feel like they don’t belong or can’t succeed in tech because they have a disability.”

Luke

“Email presents a challenge when there is no web alternative, (“click here to view in your browser”). Not all mail apps support font resizing or allow saving to a reader app (Instapaper/Pocket), and so low-vision people have to make do or wait to read it on a computer.”

Inclusivity Impacts

Inclusivity

Looks at traits or identification, such as ethnicity, race, or gender

Accessibility

Can include degrees of impairment such as sight, mobility or learning disabilities
